SAMA Governor says Saudi economy is safe from global turmoil

Governor of the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency (SAMA) Dr. Mohamed Al-Jasser offered public assurances last week that the global financial crisis will not affect the solvency of Saudi banks or their ability to gain profits.

In a statement released February 17, Al-Jasser explained that Saudi banks will be affected by local rather than external factors, because the majority of their investment transactions take place locally.

Furthermore, during a February 15 press conference Al-Jasser noted that the conservative policies adopted by SAMA saved the Kingdom from many of the harmful effects of the world financial crisis and strengthened the Saudi economy. He added that there are no shortages or delays in providing the necessary financing for projects and economic activities in the Kingdom.

Meanwhile, on February 23, SAMA launched its new website, www.sama.gov.sa. The website contains a large amount of financial information, including economic regulations and indicators, and periodicals issued by SAMA.
